 Welcome Aspiring Pilot!! I'm REALLY glad you're here.

This site exists to share real-world insight into flight training and the journey toward becoming a commercial pilot, based on my own experiences and lessons learned along the way. The goal is simple: to make the path a little clearer (and hopefully less overwhelming) for those coming up behind.

That said, a few important points to be clear about:

**This is personal experience, not professional advice****

Everything shared here reflects my own opinions and experiences. It's NOT official guidance, and it shouldn't be taken as professional, financial, or career advice. Everyone's situation is different, and there's no single "right" path into aviation.

**You are responsible for your own decisions****

Any choices you make based on what you read here are entirely your own. Flight training is a major commitment—financially and personally—so it's important to do your own research and speak with qualified professionals (such as certified flight instructors, accredited training organizations, and relevant aviation authorities) before making decisions.

**No guarantees****

Aviation is an industry that changes constantly. Hiring cycles, training costs, requirements, and opportunities can all shift. While I do my best to keep things accurate and helpful, I can't guarantee outcomes, timelines, or results.

**No affiliation with my employer****

This is a personal project. It is not connected to, endorsed by, or representative of any airline or organization I work for (past or present). Nothing here reflects the views or policies of my employer, and I don't share any confidential or inside information.

**Community, not instruction** Think of this as a community built on shared experience. The idea is to help each other, learn from those a few steps ahead, and eventually pass that knowledge on. It's not about telling anyone what they should do—just offering perspective that might help you decide what's right for you.

If you take one thing away from this site, let it be this: ask questions, cross-check everything, and make the decision that's right for YOUR situation.

By using this site, you agree that I won't be held liable for any loss, cost, or consequence (financial, career-related, or otherwise) that may arise from decisions you make based on the information shared here.

Wishing you all the best on your journey
